"NIL SALIS AUDEAMUS, NIL VENI SON AUDAM IMORE."—(Cicero.)

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22nd, 1862

The President and Cabinet.

A straw will indicate the current of a stream, and we may pronounce it a happy augury that specie fell over one per cent on the last day of Congress. This is a clear proof of the general confidence in President Mitre, on whom now depends the entire management of affairs. Our republican system demands the assistance of both Legislative Chambers during certain intervals, yet their chief utility is but as a conspicuous to the Executive, and we anticipate the six month's recess will bring us more real progress than we have experienced since May last.

The chief magistrate has wisely secured his power by placing this capital under his sole jurisdiction, and acquired the sympathy and co-operation of all foreigners by declaring that his programme will comprise railways, immigration, agriculture and commerce. Words are, indeed, cheap, and if we did not see these useful enterprises already sprouging up under the especial care of Government, we might wait another year, before guaranteeing the promises of one who enters for popularity.

The formation of the new Ministry is further calculated in an eminent degree to confirm the high opinion of General Mitre so widely evinced in his unanimous election to power. After the great efforts to federalize the province, it is something rare to magnanimous to find the premiership given to the silent member of the Opposition. Few citizens enjoy such universal respect as the unpretending physician lately elevated to this post, and his profound legal studies and unimpassioned opinions shew that the Executive aimed only at choosing a wise counsellor, to lead his Cabinet.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Elizalde, is one of the most signal examples of young men of talent who push themselves forward to high position, partly by dint of persevering exertion and still more by the timely display of their native abilities. Although he has no particular antecedents to justify his appearance in the foreign portfolio, he is a distinguished debater and has served the country with zeal in the late capital question.

The Finance Minister is a veteran statesman, and second to none in skill, research and penetration. It is a homage to national credit that the fearless defender of the Paraná Bonds should be chosen to manage the public revenues in their present critical state. The "Reforma Pacifica" attacks Dr. Sarsfield's principles, but, while disclaiming the honor of becoming his apologist, we know of no better man, since the other candidate, Sr. Riestra, refused the office.

Dr. Costa merited such praise for his demeanour during the capital question that we should have been sorry to miss his name from the Cabinet; the branch, however, confided to him is not quite to-propos. He is neither as devout as Sr. Frias, nor scholastic as Dr. Sarmiento, and we fear Instruction and Worship may not be congenial to him as the Drama or Opera. He would be invaluable in "Foreign Affairs" both from his partiality to foreigners and immigration, and by reason of his proficiency in the language.

Gen. Gelly should now turn his whole attention to the frontier, and labor as constantly to repel the Indians as he formerly did to defeat the caudillos. The war-ministry must be a sinecure in the young republic, except for the purpose of protecting settlers from the red-men, and in this city we have no more necessity for troops than simply to mount guard at the prison and present arms at the Government house.

In a word, we expect that the dissolution of Congress will be a signal for renewed exertions on the part of both President and Cabinet, to foster generally the interests of the Republic, and in an especial manner the progress of Buenos Ayres.

Editor's Table.

The wet weather and closing of Congress have made things dull about town yesterday. The Revolution in Paraguay and the Banda Oriental were talked about and discussed, until people got tired of the subject.

The President's speech, at the closing of Congress, was also canvassed: some asserting that it partook slightly of our friend Zadkiel, while others insisted that neither his style, nor contents justified the assertion that the President ever kissed a certain celebrated stone in the South of Ireland.

The murder in Plaza Parque, and the knife affair in the Cabildo, have induced a few timorous citizens to address us on the subject requesting to know what measures Sr. Cazon has taken for the arrest and punishment of the guilty. We are not aware of the perpetrators have been yet arrested, but we feel certain that the chief is on their track.

The Progreso Ball, the other night, was what is called slightly flamboyant. Such is our well known City belles were chevied, and although the dancing was vigorously maintained until the "wee hours," there was a sort of "go no sals pos" about the affair which could not be accounted for.

The storm in the River has done considerable damage to the shipping. No body can be surprized at this. The boy of Rivera is nothing to our outer roads in bad weather. We want docks, and the only rationales we expect to see such things in Buenos Aires. Encenada would afford a safe harbour to every vessel in the river, but it appears that it is too far off. Moles are voted down right and thwarting, and Docks are things which only the Standard talks about. The plain fact of the matter is, when we have half a dozen of vessels bottom upwards, alongside these beautiful expenses like a specimen of nails in a nursery, at the head of the Muelle, people will begin to think about docks, and not till then: the money which is spent in lighterage, in one or 2 years would build for us a dock capable to contain a fleet.

"A New Broom sweep clean." The new national Ministers are new in office, and we hope to see business despatched with vigour. In the foreign circle, the new Minister comes in rather blind, and they under ultics in rather propitious times. The stormy debates on the Capital and Debt are over; everything seems smooth sailing before them, and if the Finance Minister commences with the up hill work in the beginning, he must not be frightened. Let him meet difficulties in the face. A fair and correct statement of the affairs of the Republic would be most acceptable, and it would shew us how things stand.

It affords us much pleasure to state that Sr Riestra has returned from his commission during the capital question that we should have been sorry to miss his name from the Cabinet; the branch, however, confided to him is not quite to-propos. He is neither as devout as Sr. Frias, nor scholastic as Dr. Sarmiento, and we fear Instruction and Worship may not be congenial to him as the Drama or Opera. He would be invaluable in "Foreign Affairs" both from his partiality to foreigners and immigration, and by reason of his proficiency in the language.

Gen. Gelly should now turn his whole attention to the frontier, and labor as constantly to repel the Indians as he formerly did to defeat the caudillos. The war-ministry must be a sinecure in the young republic, except for the purpose of protecting settlers from the red-men, and in this city we have no more necessity for troops than simply to mount guard at the prison and present arms at the Government house.

In a word, we expect that the dissolution of Congress will be a signal for renewed exertions on the part of our principal river-ports, and is improving rapidly.

The Argentine races were a complete failure: horses, jockeys and pretty women have voted it so. On the way out, things were pleasant enough, until the rain began; but coming home the ground was unrivalled for its people seemed anxious to encounter the fact of their having been there, the majority of the excursionists having entered the city by some retired street, for obvious reasons. It is a strange thing, yet a positive fact, that latterly, whenever those races are to come off, we have wet weather. Very little money was either lost or won, and the numerous people assert that they are out of pocket by the affair. Bottle-holders were scarce: the majority of the spectators remained unconcerned in corner couches, looking on at the insipid amusements.

The Grand Prior of Ireland.

The greatest name that Ireland has given to the annals of Austria no longer heads the roll of the armies of the Empire: Laval, Nugent and Count Maguire, the Field-Marshal of his Apostolic Majesty's army, Knight of the Golden Fleece, and Grand Prior of Ireland in the Sovereign Order of St. John, peacefully breathed his last at his Castle of Boslilevo in Croatia, at four o'clock on the morning of the 22nd of August. Well may the standard which he so often advanced to glory hang drooping in sorrow by his bier! Well may the monarch and the many nations of Austria mourn! The bravest, the loyalest, the wisest and the oldest soldier in the service of the Kaiser has won his last victory, and surrendered his soul to God. For him the pleasant pastures and valleys of Wexford, the country he left Ballnascreen, is more by, seventy-three years ago, to learn the art of arms, has at last reached the term of his career, bequeathing to the land of his birth no less than to that of his adoption, the legacy of a stainless fame, and a great example—the memory of a career worthy of the high Catholic nation from will h he sprung, and of the illustrious Catholic monarchy which he served.

Laval Nugent was the eldest son of John Nugent, of Ballinacarrow, a younger branch of the ancient family of D'Irland: w s born at Inchinch-a-neat in the year 1777. In 1790 he entered the Military School at Vienna, and in 1791 received his first commission in the Austrian service, in which his uncle Oliver Count Nugent held the rank of Colonel. At the battle of Mayence, next year, he showed such taut and courage that he was promoted on the field, to the rank of Captain of Engineers. In 1799, he achieved that fame or, which is the first ambition of every Austrian officer. On the field of Novi, he distinguished himself by splendid as to merit the Cross of the Order of Marie Therese, the highest military distinction of chivalry in Austria, and which at once raises the holder, whatever his previous rank, to the dignity of a Baron of the Holy Roman Empire. He held the command of his brigade, all his superior officers having been disabled, through the last hour of the stubborn battle of Marengo, and came out Major. In 1805 he gained, at the battle of Caldiero, the rank of Colonel, and in 1809, after the Peace of Vienna, was advanced to the rank of Major-General. In fifteen years he had passed through every regimental rank in a army where promotion is always slow and deservedly distributed. Let if thirty two was considered an early age for an Austrian general, to young Irishman might have excused himself by pleading that every commission he held after the first, had been won on the date of a battle.

His talents were well suited to war even then, though he had had no other experience. Prince Metternich was a shrewd judge of character, and would not have ventured to appoint even an officer who had exhibited such brilliant military qualities, as his second Plenipotentiary to the Congress which preceded Napoleon's marriage with Archduchess, if he was not aware that General Nugent possessed many of the qualities of a statesman as well as all those of a soldier. He proved it, indeed, in a way that was not at all expected. He refused to subscribe the proposed conditions, resigned his rank, and retired to England—a noble avowal of the independence of his character, and not less so, of his foresight and good judgment—for there is no one now to maintain that the conduct of Austria, at that moment did any honour to her history. In England, General Nugent was at once offered the same rank which he held in the Austrian army; and was subsequently promoted to that of Lieutenant-General. In 1813 he was sent back to Vienna, charged with communications of the highest importance from the government of the Prince Regent. His character powerfully impressed all the British statesmen of the period with whom he came in contact, and commanded their complete confidence.

The course of this autumn proved that Nugent's brilliant military talents had not rusted in the exercise of diplomacy. His campaign in Croatia and Illyria was an exhibition of sagacity, energy, rapidity, and tact, which, if it had been all of one, in threw himself into Croatia, cut his way through the French, who occupied the province in considerable force, to the Adriatic, where he could rest his little army on the British squadron commanded by Admiral Freemantle. He then raised the rough and ready borderers of the Banat—harnessed, and disciplined, and cut off the communications of the French, bewildered them with a hundred manœuvres, till finally driving them to the conviction that they were over-powered and at last he drove them pell-mell through Illyria into Italy. Then, uniting the fleet to blockade the port, he besieged, and took the citadel of Trieste by a battery of artillery; and some Corsican and Calabrian detachments. With these he boldly crossed the Adriatic, and flung himself on the mainland a little south of the Po. He at first fortified Comachio but finding the French were weak* than he had supposed, though still in an immense superiority of numbers, he assumed the offensive, gave battle successfully at Forli, Ferrara and Ravenna, and completed the blockade of Venice. Early next year, having been reinforced, he again attacked the French at Reggio, Parma and Piacenza, and after a series of bloody actions, ended the campaign triumphantly at Valeggio. This was, says the excellent memoir by Sir Bernard Burke, the only British force that ever crossed the Peninsula of Italy from the Adriatic to the Mediterranean," and the Prince Regent not unjustly considered the feat worthy to be celebrated by the Military Knighthood—Companion's Cross of the Bath. But the expedition lived a far nobler record. At Modena, General Nugent received the Holy Father, Pius the Seventh, returning from his prison in France, at once established a throne. The army at whose head Nugent marched seldom halted long; and the Pope was now to be conducted by it to his State, in the course of a night the ladies of Modena had provided a costly wardrobe for His Holiness. The Generals forced the Pontiff to accept several hundred pounds which they had to borrow dit in the military chest; and, equipped and supplied, Pius the Seventh, after a long and wearisome journey, reached his capital amid shouts of joy, and the blessings of his people once more.

LOCAL EVENTS.

The Weather.—In consequence of the bad weather, the steamer will not leave here until the 25th inst.

Hacienda to Sell.—A German named Schmidt has a 60 % bred high mettled Mare Mules for sale for a purpose. Any one in the Republic wishing to purchase, can receive employment equally as good as 10 per cent cash, and the breeder will be enabled to buy Mules at from 2 to 3 dol. each.

San Fernando, &c.—A letter has been received from a correspondent at this place confirming the report of the rapid advance of all the places along the coast.

At Belgrano we have seen from 20 to 30 new buildings in construction the Railway station is very pretty although we think small and the rails finished.

It is a pity that the fine Sauce trees along the Calles road have been cut down, they gave a very good shade in summer and a pleasant appearance; we think in other countries old trees are respected, such happened in the great Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park, why should we not follow their good example?

At San Fernando and Las Conchas we saw over 20 new buildings, and about 100 petitions for land in the Municipality of the latter place.

On the road to San Fernando we have seen a new down cut of considerable value, said to have cost about 100,000 dol. for threading in a large scale.

Thus every where along the coast new life springs up in anticipation of the San Fernando line, where rails are laid down as far as Belgrano.

New Omnibus.—Sr Sauce has received a new diligence for 30 passengers which is to be placed on the San Fernando.

Sir-wean.—The columns of the "Comercio Argentino" have been full daily, the last week of a tiresome polemic about the first introduction of sirwoorn into the country.

So far however we see no practical result from all a discussion.

Consular Appointment.—The Government of Montevideo have made the following.

Consul General in Hamburg, Count Gayon Ewg.

Consul General in Havana, Don Andres Crespo.

Consul in Glasgow, William Gilmour Esq.

Stock.—The Municipality have bought of Don Luis Figari, under contract one thousand tons of stone for paving street.

The Spanish squadron is expected very shortly in Montevideo en route for the Pacific

It is very probable that they will stop a month in the River Plate and visit this city.

Public Lands.—A motion has been presented to the Provincial Legislature by Sanct Fe which is intended to bring about a great change in that province.

It proposes investing a large number of present as title deeds which will give a very large revenue to the province.

Our Pastorate. The last diligence from Tucuman to Cordova only brought one passenger from that place

The Mersey will leave Montevideo on the 31st current this month.

There is one day later than usual de parture.

Immigrants. 329 have arrived at Montevideo per Indian barque Marina from Genoa.

It is probable that many of them will come to Buenos Ayres according to last accounts such is rather scarce at Montevideo.

Bolivianos. The last diligence from the interior brought Eighteen thousand dollars, Bolivians silver, to Rosario.

Espigador. This steamer was obliged to enter the Ensenada on account of the heavy S. E. gale on Monday.

Military Promotion Board. The Captain of the Cazadores de Buenos Ayres Don Nicolas Granada, the Captain of the Cazadores de Montevideo Don Manuel Velez, and the Captain of the Cazadores de Cordova Don Jose Maria Videla Castillo, have been promoted to the rank of Sargento Mayor.

Mr Brand, Mr Bishop and Mr Jones first mate of the vessel. The Captains wife was a young lady from Montevideo, Donna Rosa Velez.

Mr Jones was employed by the crew who secured him and delivered him in Montevideo when he was present and will be tried by the English laws.

The colour sergeant of American ship Regulus being in Depot of Montevideo enabled him to obtain the stomach cunning from a mortal wound and then threw himself overboard and was drowned.

Gen Gelly.—We are requested to state that the name of the English officer must now be in the American intelligencer appearing in "The Times" of the 25th inst., as having distinguished himself under the Confederate General Morgan, should have been George St. Leger Grenfell late of the Buenos Ayrean army

Married.

At Fredericton, New Brunswick, British America, on the 29th April last, the Honorable Charles Waters, Solicitor General and member of His Majesty's Executive Council, to Christian Wallace, daughter of G. Priestly Esq., late of Her Majesty's 43rd Light Infantry and Barrack Master of that station

387 for January.

Total Sales amounted to 24,364 ounces

At the plaza no transactions have taken place on account of the rain. we think that when the weather improves many an ton will be effected as stock is abundant.

At the Bolsa we know of a few sales as follows.

Wool- 6500 arrobes of the new clip at $ 95.

About 2000 do from district of Matanzas, same price

From deposit, no sales

Hey hides from from Cordova, private terms said to be at 48 cts.

Kips 5 bales from Cordova at 48 cts.

From Montevideo we hear that salt has risen; the last sale per Pin from Cadiz and Rio Janeiro Sun dangers was made at 13 cts 4 months.

The Perdia had arrived from Newport with 267 tons coal consigned to the market

Wool, 6000 arrobes of the new clip from the to loss.

Also a few days past 6500 a 7000 arrobes from Cordoba and San Genaro in the Monte at 8 loss.

Horse 13,800 have been sold at from 9 25s to 280.

Dry hersehides, 25s hides at 2 2 and 19 at $ 28.

Over 3000 arrobes of wool, of the new clip, are between Fuzos and town, and will probably be in the Plaza to-morrow On the Bolsa, yesterday, considerable anxiety prevailed as to the quality and condition of the new wool. The interpretations which we have as almost universal agreement that the wool is of excellent staple almost exclusively to wools of native extraction; but if the weather cleans up a little tomorrow will tell what this year's wool will be like. The growth coming on now is to go to Mr. Pinnock Capella del Senor; Mr Tyrrel to Dr. Sr Chaves, &c. Yesterday we were speaking to a party who had recently seen these wools, and his inference was, during his experience in the Buenos Ayres wool market, he never has seen dirty merchantable such condition: the colour is a rich yellow, the staple is of the real nerve of dirt, and the fleeces, on an average weigh 5lb. This bears out in what we have long since asserted, that, With good camps, a little care, and tar sheep, the question wool of South America is a superior article; although grease adds to the weight, it greatly stronges to the staple which, in the wool of poor thin sheep, never can be found.

We learn that several buyers are going through the Camp, purchasing the wools of fishmen at 5s duk each. Large holders, of course, will never sell to such parties, but the wools of the small proprietors think it our duty to caution all our country friends against selling to these said buyers, who, if the article declines in value, will be unable to pay for what they have bought. The best plan is for such farmers to bring their wools into town themselves and then be well have the satisfaction of knowing that he has sold at the current price

In exchange, we notice about 80,000 done at 60s. It appears from the way things look, there will be no lack of them ere. The decline in specie is quite an event worthy of notice, and cannot be accounted for by the increased currency, hence in the new National Government, which every day is gaining ground with us all.

It is absurd to suppose that there is such an augmented demand for paper, that holders of specie are obliged to realize Next month, such may arise, but at present it is altogether premature

EDITION FRANCAISE.

Octobre 22—1862.

ETRANGE

ANGLETERRE.

La détresse est grande en Angleterre dans les districts de la manufactures cotonnières. Il paraît, d'après le Standard, que le nombre des ouvriers sans travail s'élèverait bientôt à 300,000, et que pour alimenter pendant l'hiver cette masse considerable de malheureux, il faudra dépenser au moins 100.000 liv. sterl. par semaine.

Des comités s'organisent dans toutes les villes manufacturières pour recueillir les souscriptions.

Le docteur Robert Summer, archevêque de Cantorbery, primat d'Angleterre, est mort le 6 septembre. Le docteur Summer était né en 1780; il avait épousé miss Robertson en 1803. Il était veuf depuis 1829, et archevêque de Cantorbery depuis 1848.

—Il y a eu ce moment, dit le Western News, abondance de manœuvres sur les côtes méridionales de l'Irlande (Angleterre). Devant Macvaigsey un filet s'est rompu qui devait contenir, dit on, plus de 40,000 maquereaux. L'un de ces jours dernières une seine a ramené 42,000 maquereaux. Un autre jour, cinq seines ayant été ouvertes dans la baie, près du quai, les gens qui étaient à terre n'avaient qu'à plonger des paniers dans l'eau pour les retirer tout pleins de maquereaux. L'abondance de ce poisson est vraiment extraordinaire on la prend pour ainsi dire à la main. La maquereau se vend un quart de penny [2 centimes 1/2].

POLOGNE.

La fête officielle traite encore les femmes de "furies" parce qu'elles persistent à ne pas quitter le deuil. Mais le 12 août, anniversaire de l'union de la Pologne et de la Lithuanie, les bureaux s'étant déserts, les boutiques se fermant, la foule encombrait les rues et les promenades, la police arrêtait pour port de cravate blanche. Varsovie avait poussé les habits noirs et les chapeaux cylindriques qui sont diagnéaux et incommodes en tous pays, et surtout dans notre climat. La police les a pris sous sa protection. Une ordonnance a fixé la forme du chapeau des employés. Ainsi la persécution descend jusqu'aux détails de la toilette.

Dix sept mille cabanes doublent de la hâtif théopie de Saint-Petersbourg viennent d'être envoyés à Varsovie. C'est une faible part de la splendide bibliothèque emportée par le Russe.

(On se souvient qu'il acaiment les cabanes, et qu'il emportait pas commodément dans les cabanes.)

On a modifié l'organisation du Parmées. Les troupes russes formaient, même en temps de paix, une armée active; elles avaient toujours un général en chef; elles se divisaient en six corps, chacun avec un général commandant du corps et un état major spécial. Maintenant ce sont de grands commandements territoriaux, comme en France, qui ont prévalu. Les trois commandements militaires et juridiques sont celui de Varsovie en du royaume de Pologne, celui de Vilna et celui de Kief. On suppose qu'il y en aura d'établis à Petersbourg, à Moscou et à Odessa.

La différence capitale avec l'organisation française, c'est qu'en France le maréchal ne peut avoir [illegible] compléter sur les autorités civiles. En Russie, le général chargé d'un commandement militaire est aussi gouverneur de province, et il exerce un pouvoir dictatorial.

Les discours et les articles officiels avaient fait grand bruit, à la suite de l'attentat contre le grand-duc Constantin, de la confiance de ce frère de Pempereur, de sa popularité et du soin qu'il mettait à se promener sans escorte. Or, il ne se montrait qu'entouré de Cosaques. Ce point a été publié par le conseil administratif qui a repris sente au grand-duc la nécessité de ne sortir que bien entouré.

Mais le grand duc est furieux de la [illegible] des Polonais: il craque dit-on qu'il abandonner un poste qu'il n'a pas su rendre tenable par de larges concessions. Son départ serait, comme le fut celui de l'archiduc Maximilien pour les Milanais, l'aveu qu'en Pologne les demi-mesures n'ont pas réussi à concilier les oppresseurs et les opprimés.

Nous complétons la liste des Russes qui doivent être arrêtés à leur retour de Pétersbourg. Voici[illegible] noms :

Peretz [Grégoire], Slytine, Nefdiul, Vilberg, Gollyski, Kussakinn."

LA PRUSSE

Le gouvernement prussien vient d'adresser au Danemarck une nouvelle Note sur la question insoluble des duchés. Quelque depuis ans z longtemps les parties respectives se contentent d'une guerre de mots, il paraît que cette fois la Note prussienne est de nature à amener des complications sérieuses.

Du reste, le cabinet de Copenhague n'a pas encore répondu. A la légation du Danemarck à Paris, on dit que le roi Christian a pris congé à Stockholm et à Londres pour la réponse à faire à Berlin, tout en ayant, il a présent, l'intention bien arrêté de ne céder en quoi que ce soit au sujet du Schleswig.

Au surplus, le cabinet de Berlin semble vouloir affronter plus d'une difficulté. Sans parler de ses querelles [illegible] Parlement, il prend des airs impératifs avec la Bavière et le Wurtemberg, auxquels il vient de signifier que leur rejet du traité franco prussien impliquerait une [illegible] au Zollverein à l'exception des arrangements actuels. On ne sait où s'arrêtent les démonstrations menaçantes du roi de Prusse.
